

Mi-Sook Kim, MD, PhD

Dr Kim is a radiation oncologist and the former President of Korea Institute of Radiological and Medical Sciences (KIRAMS), Republic of Korea . She graduated medical school of Seoul National University in 1989 and finished residency course of radiation oncology at Seoul National University Hospital in 1994. And since then, she has been working for KIRAMS. She has contributed to improving cancer treatment in developing countries in collaboration with IAEA. Especially, under the framework of IAEA regional technical cooperation projects, she has fostered education programs and expert missions for medical doctors and medical physicists in Asian countries. She has been participating as an Advisory Member of Standing Advisory Group on Technical Assistance and Cooperation since 2019

